Viewing the Islamic Orient Pallavi Pandit Laisram, 2014-07-11 The Islamic Orient studies the travel accounts of four British travelers during the nineteenth century Through a critical analysis of these works the author examines and questions Edward Said's concept of Orientalism and Orientalist discourse his argument that the orientalist view had such a strong influence on westerners that they invariably perceived the orient through the lens of orientalism On the contrary the author argues no single factor had an overwhelming influence on them She shows that westerners often struggled with their own conceptions of the orient and being away for long periods from their homelands were in fact able to stand between cultures and view them both as insiders and outsiders The literary devices used to examine these writings are structure characterization satire landscape description and word choice as also the social and political milieu of the writers The major influences in the author's analysis are Said Foucault Abdel Malek and Marie Louise Pratt The New Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature: Volume 4, 1900-1950 George Watson, I. R. Willison, 1972-12-07 More than fifty specialists have contributed to this new edition of volume 4 of The Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature The design of the original work has established itself so firmly as a workable solution to the immense problems of analysis articulation and coordination that it has been retained in all its essentials for the new edition The task of the new contributors has been to revise and integrate the lists of 1940 and 1957 to add materials of the following decade to correct and refine the bibliographical details already available and to re shape the whole according to a new series of conventions devised to give greater clarity and consistency to the entries National Union Catalog, 1973 Includes entries for maps and atlases Adult Catalog: Authors Los Angeles County Public Library, 1970 The Reader's Adviser, 1986 The Later Jacobean and Caroline Dramatists Terence P. Logan, Denzell S. Smith, 1978 This book gives a comprehensive account of recent scholarship on English plays and playwrights exclusive of Shakespeare It includes plays and playwrights of both popular and private theaters for the time period from 1616 to 1642 from Book Jacket The Natural History of H.G. Wells John Robert Reed, 1982 This new study offers a general reassessment of H G Wells as a writer and thinker It concentrates upon the close relationship between Wells developing philosophy and his literary techniques The early chapters examine Wells treatment of such subjects as confinement and escape sex the nature of human identity the relationship of individual to race human progress and the importance of education At the same time the describe the emotional topography that Wells created as a mean of vivifying his ideas a topography constructed from image complexes largely based upon the analogy between individual and racial evolution The major contribution of the book comes in its later chapters which deal with Wells metaphysical assumptions and his approach to his craft His views on free will and strength of will were intimately related to his methods of literary composition The important later chapters detail this relationship while describing some of Wells characteristic literary devices such as the intentional violations of certain novelistic conventions or the sly borrowing from and alluding to contemporary works of literature in what amounted to a covert polemic On the whole this study argues for a coherent and consistent though developing philosophy operating throughout Wells career and manifested in experimental literary works which while not always successful were consistently inventive and intelligently crafted in the service of Wells principle aim the education of the human species to a command of its own destiny English Literature E.
