The Gold Hunters Field:

The Gold Hunter's Field Book Jay Ellis Ransom, 1980 Pioneer Boys of the Gold Fields Ralph Bonehill, 1906

The Gold Hunters: A First-hand Picture of Life in California Mining Camps in the Early Fifties John David Borthwick, CALIFORNIA under Spanish and Mexican rule was a lotus land of lazy good natured hospitable friars of tame and submissive Indian neophytes of vast savannas swarming with half wild herds of orchards and gardens vineyards and olive groves There was no mining no lumbering no machinery no commerce other than a contraband exchange of hides and tallow for clothing merchandise and manufactures There was no art no science no literature no news save at rare intervals from the outer world One day was like another from generation to generation Everyone was content with his mode of life or ignorant of any other War never harassed the Franciscans drowsy realm nor ever threatened beyond a few op ra bouffe affairs that began and ended in loud talk and bloodless gesticulation Under the old Spanish law foreign commerce was prohibited and foreign travelers were excluded from California But Boston traders managed to evade it by collusion with local officials and strangers did enter the land sailors and merchants of divers nationalities came across seas and settled along the coast while hunters and trappers crossed overland from the States Generally they were welcomed and encouraged to establish themselves in California though in defiance of the Mexican government The foreigners being for the most part men of enterprise and energy were respected and became influential Many of them married into native California families were naturalized and acquired large estates Among the Americans was John A Sutter formerly a Swiss military officer who in 1839 was permitted to build a fortified post on the present site of Sacramento He received a large grant of land around it and became a Mexican official As a result of the Mexican war California was ceded to the United States on the 2d of February 1848 Nine days earlier an event occurred that was destined to fix upon this splendid province the fascinated gaze of all the world On the 24th of January at Colonel Sutter s mill near the present Coloma a workman named James W Marshall discovered gold Within a few months amazingly rich placers were found in river bars creeks and gulches of this and the surrounding region During the first year or two of discovery it was not unusual for a miner to wash or dig up a hundred ounces of gold in a day Some lucky strikes were made of five to ten times this amount and nuggets were picked up of from 1 000 to 20 000 value Within a few hundred yards of a populous town a man stubbed his toe against a protruding rock glaring in wrath at the stumbling block he was thunderstruck at the sight of more gold than quartz A market gardener abusing his sterile soil for producing cabbages that were all stalk was quickly placated by finding gold adhering to their roots the cabbage patch was successfully worked for years and pieces of gold of many pounds weight were taken from it Stories went abroad of places where the precious metal was blasted out in chunks of ledges so rich that it could be picked out of the fissures with a bowie knife of men digging up gold as they would potatoes and of a competence being amassed by a few hours work with a tin spoon For two or three months the tales that came from the diggings were received with incredulity but when larger and larger shipments of the yellow metal kept coming to the coast there was a wild stampede for the gold fields Settlements were completely deserted homes farms and stores abandoned Ships deserted by their sailors crowded the bay at San Francisco there were five hundred of them in July 1850 soldiers deserted wholesale churches were emptied town councils ceased to sit merchants clerks lawyers and judges and criminals everybody flocked to the foothills Soon from Hawaii Oregon and Sonora from the Eastern States the South Seas Australia South America and China came an extraordinary flow of the hopeful and adventurous In the winter of 48 the rush began from the States to Panama and in the spring across the plains It is estimated that 80 000 men reached the coast in 1849 about half of them coming overland three fourths were Americans By 1851 the number of actual miners had risen to about 140 000 From across the Atlantic there came Britons Germans Frenchmen Italians others speaking strange tongues until the mines of California were likened to so many towers of Babel and pantomime often took the part of speech Never before had there been brought together in a far quarter of the earth a body of men of so varied trades and professions all massed in a twinkling to one common pursuit Social distinctions vanished at a touch Soft handed lawyers and clergymen wielded pick and shovel side by side with born navvies cooked their own meals and washed their own clothes No honest labor lowered the dignity of a gentleman since that gentleman needs must wait upon himself and provide for himself with the work of his own hands Out of this common necessity grew as it were over night a natural democracy in which all men met each other on an equal footing No deference was paid save to conspicuous ability of such sort as was useful in the work at hand The popular notion of a miner is that of a rude and reckless fellow who works one day with a tin pan and gets drunk the next There were indeed many of this ilk in the gold diggings but in the main the miners of 49 were a picked and superior class of men It was not as if a bonanza had been struck within easy reach of the riffraff of the nations California by the shortest route was two thousand miles from any well populated part of America five thousand from a European port The journey thither was expensive and most of the men who undertook it were such as had accumulated by their own industry a good stake at home They were adventurers to be sure but what is an adventurer One who hazards a chance especially a chance of danger That is the spirit which starts almost any enterprise that demands courage determination and self reliance Beyond this the argonauts were notably capable and intelligent men as their works soon proved An unbiased observer said of them Perhaps in no other community so limited could one find so many well informed and clever men men of all nations who have added the advantages of traveling to natural abilities and a liberal education Most of them were charged with spontaneous and persistent energy Immediately as by an electric shock the California of dreaming friars and lazy vaqueros was tossed aside and an amazing industry whirled into action
