Tokyo Jeremy Seymour Eades, 1999 The Tokyo region of Japan is in terms of population the largest urban area on earth. Its centre comprises the 23 wards of Tokyo itself but the urban sprawl has long since extended to include the other major cities of Kawasaki and Yokohama. From the early 16th century when the Tokugawa rulers of Japan established their administrative headquarters there Edo as it was known developed quickly into one of the largest cities in the world. It was renamed Tokyo or Eastern Capital when the Emperor moved there in 1868. In the 20th century most of Tokyo was destroyed first by the Kanto earthquake of 1923 and then by the American bombing of 1945. Nonetheless it was rapidly rebuilt and is now along with London and New York one of the major control centres of the global economy. Yet behind the ultramodern facade of the main commercial areas Tokyo remains largely a city of narrow streets and small intimate neighbourhoods. However the threat of serious earthquakes remains and the relocation of the capital is being increasingly discussed. This is the first annotated critical survey of the English language literature on Tokyo and its region.

The City as Target Ryan Bishop, Gregory Clancey, John W. Phillips, 2012-03-29 Bringing together scholars from a diverse range of disciplines The City as Target provides a sustained and critical response to the relationship between the concept of targeting in its many forms and notions of understanding, imagining and shaping the urban. Among the many spatial and graphic terms used to describe cities in urban studies the word target is rarely encountered. Though equally spatial it differs from these others by implying some motive force and more than that a force with some intentionality. To target is to aim to project and ultimately to impact. It suggests a space of violence or at least action or movement resulting in displacement which most other terms do not. In that sense it is useful, underused and perhaps revelatory. Rather than approach the city as simply a site of growth processes and developments the contributors to this volume treat it as the recipient of attentions. The work draws on a wide variety of geographical sites and historic monuments in order to explore this concept examining and challenging current urban theories. It seeks to highlight both the power of The Global City and the current vulnerability and fragility of urban culture exploring the city as a recipient and a culprit in relation to issues including terrorism and urban warfare, the latest cyclical failure of global financial markets and the relatively new spectre of environmental unsustainability. Offering a unique and relevant contribution to the literature this work will be of great interest to scholars of urban theory, international relations, postcolonial politics and military studies.
