Gary Paul Green, Rhonda G. Phillips

Together At The Table Sustainability And Sustenance In The American Agrifood System:

Together at the Table Patricia Allen, 2004 Everywhere you look people are more aware of what they eat and where their food comes from In a cafeteria in Los Angeles children make their lunchtime food choices at fresh fruit and salad bars stocked with local foods In a community garden in New York low income residents are producing organically grown fruits and vegetables for their own use and to sell at market In Madison Wisconsin shoppers select their food from a bounty of choices at a vibrant farmers market Together at the Table is about people throughout the United States who are building successful alternatives to the contemporary agrifood system and their prospects for the future At the heart of these efforts are the movements for sustainable agriculture and community food security Both movements seek to reconstruct the agrifood system the food production chain from the growing of crops to food production and distribution to become more ecologically sound economically viable and socially just Allen describes the ways in which people working in these movements view the world and how they see their place in challenging and reshaping the agrifood system She also shows how ideas and practices of sustainable agriculture and community food security have already woven their way into the dominant agrifood institutions Allen explores the possibilities this process may hold for improving social and environmental justice in the American agrifood system Together at the Table is an important reminder that much work still remains to be done Now that the ideas and priorities of alternative food movements have taken hold it is time for the next even more challenging step Alternative agrifood movements must acknowledge and address the deeper structural and cultural patterns that constrain the long term resolution of social and environmental problems in the agrifood system

Farmers' Cooperatives and Sustainable Food Systems in Europe Raquel Ajates Gonzalez, 2018-06-13 Farmers cooperatives are very prevalent in the European Union where they account for approximately half of agricultural trade and thus are key to articulating rural realities and in shaping the sustainability credentials of European food and farming This book analyses to what extent farmers cooperatives are working to benefit their members are showing concern for their communities and are promoting cooperative economies It offers a multilevel set of theoretical disciplinary methodological empirical and social perspectives using the UK and Spain as contrasting examples and analyses whether agricultural cooperatives contribute to achieving sustainable food systems The book presents empirical data from diverse and rich case studies from large international cooperatives to small multi stakeholder initiatives This provides an alternative viewpoint to that of economics which tends to dominate the study of agricultural cooperatives The author presents a new theoretical framework that provides a novel lens to study farmers cooperatives as organisations deeply embedded in power dynamics of the food system and agricultural policy that shape and constraint their potential to adopt cooperative and sustainable practices The book is a major addition to the study of agricultural cooperatives and their impact in the development of fairer and more sustainable food systems and it is one of the first detailed accounts of multi stakeholder food and farming cooperatives in Europe It is a valuable resource for all scholars
