Tomorrows Schools Principles For The Design Of Professional Development Schools:

Tomorrow's Schools Holmes Group (U.S.),1990 One argument in this report is the decisive importance of the capacity of the local school as a learning community to set its own agenda Another is the futility of the quest for one best system of educating teachers or children Both these points reinforce our conviction and our hope that professional development schools shaped around the principles we set forth here will flourish as a species and add great variety to the ecology of education One reason for creating them is to promote diversity and experimentation in an educational landscape that often looks flat and monotonous Rich variety will prove to be a source of great strength in the ensuing conversations among the network of those taking part in this work From the preface Tomorrow's Schools Holmes Group (U.S.),1995
